- * Project Cybercyn objective: To install a preliminary system of information
- * and regulation for the industrial economy that will demonstrate the main
- * features of cybernetic management and begin to help in the task of actual
- * decision-making by March 1st 1972.

Under the circumstances of a nationalized economy, it was a positive thing.

It was a massive application of cybernetic feedback to help each industry and each factory keep track of itself through a central location. All communications flowed through the central location.

This is what Stafford Beer refers to as 'Brain of the Firm'. It was located in Santiago, Chile.

For NSA, it is Fort Meade in Maryland, USA.

- * Project Cybercyn consisted of four major tools:

*

- * Cybernet, a national network of industrial communications to a centre
- * in Santiago, through which anyone could consult anyone else.

*

- * Cyberstride, the suite of computer programs needed to provide
- * statistical filtration for all homeostatic loops at all levels
- * of recursion, and provide alerts via an 'arousal filter'.

- * Checo, the model of the Chilean economy, with simulation capacity.

*

- * Opsroom, a new environment for decision, and dependent for its
- * existence
