and the Government over what even constitutes child pornography.

- * The New York Times, 1995
- * Newark, NJ, Jan 12 (AP)
- *
- * A judge ruled today that a father must stand trial for taking nude photos
- * of his six-year-old daughter, despite the man's claim that the pictures
- * were art, not pornography.
- *
- * The judge ruled they were not art, despite Mr. Feuer's instructor, Susan
- * Klechner of the International Center of Photography in New York City,
- * submitting an affidavit saying the pictures were taken for the course
- * and were consistent with the assignment.
- *
- * After his arrest, Mr. Feuer was ordered not to have contact with his
- * daughter and could not stay at his home while the prosecution's
- * investigation continued.
- *
- * The order was lifted last April, but David Ruhnke, Mr. Feuer's lawyer,
- * said "It's really difficult to overstate what a nightmare this has
- * been for him."
- *
- * Mr. Ruhnke further complained that the judge revealed Mr. Feuer's name
- * in court papers while he was still making motions to dismiss the case,
- * to protect the girl.

Parents charged with child pornography for taking photos of their children.

Thought Police.

We netizens are rightfully paranoid of the American government, because it has no scruples.

What the FBI did to photographer Jock Sturges was criminal.
