- * The FBI's Rapid Prototyping Facility (RPF) is a laboratory and factory dedicated to the design and manufacture of "unique miniaturized devices in direct support of various investigative efforts" of the "FBI and other members of the U.S. law enforcement community."

- * Operated jointly by the FBI and the Pentagon's Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA, creators of the Internet), the FBI facility was created to allow the bureau "to use computer-aided design, engineering and manufacturing of tools and equipment (software and firmware respectively) to design, simulate, and fabricate integrated circuits, printed circuit boards, electronic components, packages, systems and concealments in a quick turnaround cost-effective manner."

- * Among the facilities advantages are speed "through the use of laser restructuring, high-density interconnect, and reverse milling capability," and a capability "to produce an integrated microphone ('microphone on a chip') in a single design/fabrication process."

- * For many years, the FBI had been placing secret microphones on street-lamps, telephone poles, parking meters and empty automobiles parked near locations where its targets sometimes strolle
